

GHOST STORIES of Washington Township

Although many histories have been written, and numerous articles published about Washington township, there has never been any mention made of native ghost tales, originating in the environs of the township, and gravely believed by residents many years ago.

Some ghost stories, like mythology, often follow a common theme, with local variations, and are easy to "spot" as products of an active imagination. There are some, however, that are unique, and told with lowered voices by the old-timers.

In the latter category is the tale of the priest and the cat, which is said to have originated in Mission San Jose shortly before the turn of the century.

As the legend has it, and as old-time residents will remember, a large, dark house once stood on what is now the grounds of the Mission San Jose Grammar school. It was a deserted house, with closely boarded windows, and the good people of the town firmly believed it was haunted. Not that any eerie manifestations had ever been seen near it, but it was silent, cold.

At that time, so the tale goes, the priest of the Mission parish was a young man, not given to superstitions, who scoffed at the trembling of his flock and volunteered to spend a night in the dark house. He would put an end to this nonsense.

Unescorted, and armed with a book and candles, the holy man made his way to the house early one night, gained entrance and ensconced himself at a tumble-down table. There was no sound, and the hours were away without event. Shortly before dawn, so the story goes, the padre, who had swelled with confidence, heard a tiny scratching at the window sill.

He arose, lighted another candle, and flung the window wide. Nothing there, save a large, affable tom cat, which immediately sprang into the room, and began ingratiating himself by rubbing against the priest's legs, purring meanwhile. With a whistle of relief, the Holy man picked up the furry beast, placed it in his lap, and scolded it for giving him a fright. He continued to talk to it, telling it of the fears of the people, and the ghosts, and how he would chuckle when he told of the night the next day. "Just I and a cat," said the priest.

Then it happened. Slanting one green eye up at the man, the cat remarked dryly: "That's right, nobody here but the two of us."

RECEIVING CLASS AT GRAMMAR SCHOOL IS LARGER

With new faces in almost every class, and a total enrollment of thirty pupils in the receiving class, attendance at the Niles Grammar school is slightly larger this fall.

There has been a rearrangement of teachers this time, according to Principal E. Dixon Bristow, who states that he will devote all of his time to administrative work and transfer the eighth grade teaching duties to Miss Celeste Bunker, veteran teacher. Miss Dorothy Van Dervoort will teach the seventh, Miss Macke the sixth, Miss De Jong the fifth, Miss Bennett the fourth, Miss Keller the third, Miss Chenery and Miss Breire the second, Miss Keran and Miss Enos the first grades.

The second grades will be enlarged with the transference of a number of pupils from the high first and third grades.

Dustpans Gather Grain After Spill From Truck

While rounding the corner at the intersection of the Mission highway and the Centerville road Tuesday afternoon, a heavy truck spilled numerous sacks of wheat, which burst and covered the pavement with a yellow carpet.

The neighborliness of the nearby housewives was immediately manifested, when they came to the rescue with dustpans and brooms to help the driver recover his cargo. Chickens, attracted to the scene by the unprecedented supply of feed, were kept from the booty with sticks, until after the truck had departed.

The driver, who stated that his destination was San Francisco, blamed the accident on a frayed rope.

THIEVES FORCE WAY INTO HOME; TAKE CLOTHING

Taking advantage of his absence over the week-end, thieves broke into the home of Manuel Oliveria, Western Pacific section foreman here, Sunday night, and took clothing and articles of considerable value.

Oliveria, who had left home Saturday night, stationed Tom Camarina to watch his house. Camarina left the premises for a short time Sunday evening, to find the house ransacked on his return. The thieves had forced a window.

A suit of good clothes, shoes, a leather coat, quilts and table clothes formed the bulk of the loot. Police are conducting a search for the articles.

TWO BOYS TO GET STATE FARMER "GOLD KEY"

Two members of Washington Union High school chapter, Future Farmers, will be honored at the State Fair this week, when they will receive golden keys signifying their membership as State Farmers. The two boys, who will receive their keys from Governor Merriam are Anthony Silva and Raymond Oliveria.

Members of the State Farmer group are chosen each year from among the numerous chapters for outstanding work in their special line of activity. Only thirty are chosen each time.

In addition to the two honorees, four other members of the local chapter will attend the fair today and tomorrow. Robert Whipple, Peter Bunting, Richard Mendoza and Anthony Silva will display corn. Silva has been doing some particularly interesting and valuable work. Lawrence Souza will display potatoes, showing value of new varieties in Washington township.

The boys will be accompanied to the capitol city by Paul Daugherty, advisor and instructor of the local chapter.

The beautifully appointed wedding ceremony was held Friday evening at the Claremont Country Club. A reception and supper at the Mosher home followed the rites.

Mrs. McDonald, who is a niece of Mrs. H. R. Hunt, of Niles, is acquainted here. The couple will make their home in Piedmont.

ANNUAL CANDY GIFT IS LURE FOR CHILDREN

NILES' GRAMMAR school through Dick Carvo's generous nature, is probably the only institution in the United States that lures its youngsters back into the fold with candy.

Each year, at the opening of the fall term, Principal E. Dixon Bristow and Dick go into closed conference, to discuss the possible number of pupils, each of whom is to get a plump all-day sucker on the first day of classes.

This time Dick provided 364 individual pieces, all of the same color, so that no juvenile jealousies would develop on the distribution day. Dick explained that latecomers have their place saved for them.

Benefit of the custom is three-fold; Dick's good nature is tickled, Principal Bristow's opening attendance is bigger, and the kids—just ask them!

ED. ROSE BREAKS ANKLE IN SIERRA A U T O ACCIDENT

Fishing trips in the Sierra Nevada mountains seem to have a real jinx on Ed. Rose, prominent Niles businessman, who suffered a broken ankle Saturday night when his car skidded and overturned near Longbarn. It was only two months ago that Rose sustained a broken wrist when he fell into a Sierra stream while fishing.

The accident Saturday night occurred when Rose, blinded by the lights of an approaching car, narrowly missed going over the canyon wall, then struck loose gravel and overturned his car. He was unscratched in the accident, but while assisting garagemen to right the car slipped beneath the machine when it was lowered with a jerk.

He will be on crutches for several weeks.

The rites took place at 9 o'clock in the chapel beautifully decorated with summer flowers. The Rev. Mr. Bone officiated.

The new Mrs. Benner, who is a graduate of the Oakland schools, will give up her playground work, and come to Centerville with her husband, who is employed here by the Standard Oil Company. She was attended at the wedding by her sister, Mrs. Alta Godwin, of Richmond. Elmer Hopkins, of Sunnyvale, was best man.

Benner, who has had wide experience in handling boys as supervisor of a Gilroy orphanage, is deeply interested in Boy Scout work here. He is assistant to District Commissioner Albert Lewis, and in charge of training activities among the senior scouts.

DECOTO SCHOOL TO BEGIN FALL TERM NEXT TUESDAY

Tuesday, September 10, is the date set for the opening of the Decoto Grammar school, according to word from Principal Lewis Musick this week. A larger opening enrollment is expected this term, the principal said, pointing out that the late opening date will find vacation trips and tasks at an end.

With the release of two teachers and the addition of one, the teaching staff will be reduced from eleven to ten. Mrs. Marie Fowden and Miss Levadna Hill, first and second grade teachers last year, will not return this year. Mrs. A. P. Peacock, wife of former Principal A. P. Peacock, will be added to the staff, Musick said.

Other teachers will be: Mrs. Jeanette Schaff, Mrs. Murel McDermott, Miss Mildred Smith, Mrs. Ruby L. Rogers, Mrs. Blanche Henningson, Mrs. Edith Fletcher, Mrs. Matilda Horwood, Mrs. Marian Long and Mrs. Gladys Fairbanks.

Musick, who said that he is pleased with the faculty, is the son of Eph L. Musick, long-time principal of the Newark Grammar school. He comes to Decoto after a year as registrar and assistant manager of Polytechnic College of Engineering and Junior College, at Oakland. Previous to his Oakland work, the new Decoto principal taught for two years in Modoc county. Alameda county is the fifth county in which he will have had teaching experience. Interested in sports and athletics as well as classroom work, the young school head hopes for a strong baseball nine this season.

During the time that the final o k e h is pending, the formation of the district will continue, with a date to be set soon for the necessary election. Immediately after the election, which is fore-shadowed as heavily favorable, the commissioners will be named and the work begun.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Godwin spent the week-end on a fishing trip to Rio Vista.

STREET CLEANING SERVICE FOR NILES BEGUN THIS WEEK

Junior Body Buys Truck; Starts Weekly Patrol Of First Street

Niles' yed-in-the-wool calamity howlers, who have lamented the unsightly condition of the streets since the removal of the county service, rubbed their eyes Sunday morning when they saw the clean gutters and tidy curbs left in the wake of the Niles Junior Chamber of Commerce street cleaning department.

Pending for many weeks, while efforts were made to obtain support of businessmen, the service was started Sunday morning, and will continue henceforth once a week. First street and the adjacent curbs on the side streets will be tidied.

James Delury, who volunteered to do the work without pay, has been appointed head of the department, and will have complete authority over the truck purchased by the young civic group for the use in the work. The vehicle, which is to be painted white in true metropolitan style, is the first "city" truck in the township.

Delury, in commenting on the service, asks that businessmen and merchants of the town co-operate in the effort to keep the street presentable. He urges that all trash possible be burned rather than thrown into the gutters, as has been the custom. Although no financial support has been asked of individual businessmen, officials of the junior group hope that an occasional contribution from civic-minded merchants will help to defray the small expense of the service.

Duarte, who had been ejected from the home of Mrs. Pietro Lopez Wednesday in company of his companion, John Luna, turned on the latter and administered several deep knife wounds. Luna refused to prefer charges, so Mrs. Lopez filed a complaint for disturbing the peace. It was on this count that Duarte was sentenced.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Theodore Gatlin decided to adopt a baby in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But all his love for their foster daughter could not shelter her childhood from the hatred of his wife, who had never wanted her. Their affairs ended in the divorce court but ten-year-old Penelope was given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin, except for two Sunday afternoons a month. On their first day together they set out joyfully to a baseball game, but into the bleachers, struck Penelope on the head and the neurotic Mrs. Gatlin removed her from the hospital to which her former husband had hurried her. Mrs. Gatlin spirited the child to Europe. Gatlin retired from business, and was about to begin a search for his daughter when a motor accident ended his life.

CHAPTER II.—Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, a rising young psychiatrist, was presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl whose terrible childhood had left her with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" was in part responsible. McNamara did not think she was a responsible criminal and obtained Burt's expert testimony in court. Even Lanny, the doctor's faithful office nurse, was won over to her cause despite Nance's hard-boiled exterior.

CHAPTER III.—Nance's criminal record outweighed Doctor Burt's clear explanation of her case and she was sent to San Quentin penitentiary for two years. Lanny visited her and Nance persuaded her to smuggle out a letter, which she confided to Lanny to deliver by handbag outside the prison walls.

CHAPTER IV.—Nance escaped, although shot, by swimming out to a speed-boat manned by friends and went to Lanny's apartment. Lanny told Chief McNamara, who ordered her to bring Nance to his apartment and phoned for Doctor Burt.

CHAPTER V.—One of the men in the boat on which Nance escaped, two of them ex-convicts, the other a bootlegger—had been wounded and they went to Burt's office, where McNamara found them. The bootlegger he let go and he took the others to his home, ordering the uninjured one to care for Nance and his pal. From them he learned that Nance's real name was Penelope Gatlin. Detective Sergeants Flynn and Angellotti, seeking reward offered for Nance's apprehension, went to Lanny's apartment in search of Nance. Looking over her San Quentin cell, McNamara found a blank check on a San Jose bank.

CHAPTER VI.—From the San Jose banker McNamara learned that the girl he knew as Nance Belden was Penelope Gatlin, heiress to a $750,000. The banker did not know Penelope's whereabouts. Mrs. Gatlin was now the wife of a man named Merton. McNamara ordered Detective Sergeants Flynn and Angellotti to "lay off" Lanny, whom they suspected of harboring Nance.

CHAPTER VII.—When Lanny got home one evening she found Nance sound asleep, curled up on her guest-room bed. Several days later the hard-boiled exterior of Nance Belden suddenly vanished and the girl became the refined Penelope Gatlin. Her partially restored memory led her to tell Lanny of her wealthy father, Theodore Gatlin, and of her childhood in France.

"Yes. Well, when the doorbell rings, you answer it. That will be Nance's tip to peek out the second story window and lob three bombs down on the cement beside whoever she sees standing there. They explode with a sound like a gunshot and diffuse their gas almost instantaneously over a considerable area. Now, whichever one goes to the back door will never be expecting a citizen to shower this sort of bomb down on him, because they are not accessible to citizens; so he will think they're electric light bulbs tossed down to scare him away. By the way, have Nance toss one electric light bulb down first and then follow with two tear bombs—here, I'll make a mark with my pencil on the tear bombs. Before he realizes what has happened he'll be weeping like Niobe and unable to see anything in the darkness.

"But bear this in mind, Lanny. He'll not desert his post. He'll hug the back door and be ready to grab her when she comes. He'll stick it out. That's the time Nance must drop a stink bomb beside him.

"Meanwhile the man in front will hear the explosions. If the one in back cries out, the one in front will figure he has been shot and will run to the back door to help him. As he opens the back door his pal will grab him. You must follow at his heels and shut and bolt the door instantly, or you'll get yours, too. There will be a momentary struggle between Flynn and Angellotti in the dark because the front door man will think he has the scoundrel that hurled the bombs; and by the time they discover each other's identity, the front door man will be as sightless and ill as the back door man.

"Nance, a word to you now."

"My name is Penelope Gatlin, Dan."

"My error, Penelope, the instant being. After watching Doctor Burt enter and leave the chief's house on Thursday night, when they knew the chief would not be home until midnight, they decided to investigate. The unlocked cellar door gave them pause; Flynn whispered that he was always suspicious of things that came too easy. They crept upstairs and found Dan McNamara's ex-convict guest reading in bed. Both detectives recognized him, so while Angellotti guarded him, Flynn made a hurried but thorough search of the premises. They were not in the house more than five minutes.

"We've been like two pups, chasing our tails," Angellotti complained when they met at their car. "The chief's up to his old tricks, babying a convict with the con, and that's the bird Doctor Burt is calling to treat."

"The girl's been there, just the same, Amadeo, my boy. There was a lipstick on the bureau and that's something old lady McNamara don't use. And I found a roll of adhesive tape, the heel of a roll of bandage and a soiled sheet with some bloodstains on it in the dirty clothes basket in the bathroom."

Angellotti was convinced. "Where did she go?"

"She might have doubled back to that old nurse's house again, but I doubt that, because she knows that's risky."

"Well, let's give Miss Lanning's house a prowling, anyhow."

Flynn was one of those hearty fellows who will try anything twice, so they went immediately to Lanny's house. The lights in front were out when they arrived, so Flynn pussy-footed around to the rear of the cottage to see if any lights were lighted there. Finding none, he listened for possible voices. Hearing none, he cautiously lifted the lid of Lanny's garbage can and bent his flashlight on it. He was rewarded for his courage by finding a stained bandage with clipped adhesive tape clinging to it. This tell-tale evidence he carried around to Angellotti; they entered their car, drove a block and inspected the clue in the light of the dash lamp. Then they silently shook hands.

"Nothing is ever lost if you know where it is," Flynn rejoiced. "We'll bone 'em the district attorney for a search warrant tomorrow, and tomorrow night when the old lady gets home, we'll make the pinch."

"Shall we pinch her as an accessory?"

"Amadeo, my boy, unless you're looking hard for something, it's a mistake to see too much or know too much. This Lanning woman is a friend of the chief's. As far as the public ever need know we picked the girl up on the street."

Angellotti nodded his acquiescence; they got the search warrant on the strength of that soiled bandage, and at nine o'clock that night arrived in their car. Flynn went to the back door and posted himself there; and Angellotti rang the front doorbell. A light was switched on in the hall presently, and Lanny, dressed for the street, opened the door six inches. Angellotti had his foot in it in a flash.

"Detective Sergeant Angellotti of the central station, Miss Lanning. I have here a search warrant, giving me legal right to search your house and secure the person of Nance Belden, an escaped convict from San Quentin penitentiary. Read it an' weep!"

"You take your big flat foot out of my door and stay outside until I've read this purported search warrant or I'll shoot your foot off," Lanny informed him coldly. Angellotti withdrew his foot promptly. Lanny closed the door, and he could see her faintly through the curtained glass, reading.

"Come in," she invited—and at that moment the electric light bulb tossed out of the upper window by Nance exploded with a loud report.

"What's that?" Angellotti cried, instantly alert. The respective wives of the worthy pair telephoned down to the chief of the detectives next morning and informed him that their husbands were confined to bed with influenza.

It was not a police car in which Nance had escaped, but the private vehicle of Detective Sergeant Flynn, and its loss troubled him until the car was found, abandoned in the Mission, about twenty-voice trembled with the sincerity of his purpose.

"What's That?" Angellotti Cried, Instantly Alert.

The respective wives of the worthy pair telephoned down to the chief of the detectives next morning and informed him that their husbands were confined to bed with influenza.

It was not a police car in which Nance had escaped, but the private vehicle of Detective Sergeant Flynn, and its loss troubled him until the car was found, abandoned in the Mission, about twenty-four hours later. A glance at the speedometer comforted Flynn. The car had been driven six miles. In company with Angellotti (both now happily recovered from their terrible experience) he drove in the same car from Lanny's house, via the most direct route, to the point where a patrolman had picked up the car; thence via the route followed by the patrolman when he came off duty and drove the car to the central station and reported it. The mileage was six and two-tenths miles!

"She's holed up within a block or two of where she left the car," Flynn decided.

"Not such a cold trail, after all," Angellotti exulted. "We'll just have to patrol the neighborhood in our off moments. I'm sure the girl doesn't know she swiped your car, and that she gave us a clue to follow her."

"If crooks didn't make mistakes and give us the breaks, my boy, you and I wouldn't be where we are," Flynn reminded him. "I think it might be a good idea to interview the druggist in the neighborhood and see if she's been in to buy a new lipstick."

A round of the neighborhood drug stores, however, proved barren of a new lead, and as they had other matters claiming their attention, they were forced to abandon the search that day.

Dan McNamara was much too intelligent to make inquiries of the assistant district attorney who had issued the search warrant, but when informed that Flynn and Angellotti were down with flu he called up Lanny at Stephen's office, and received a meticulous report. "You say the girl fled in the car my dicks arrived in?" he queried. "That's terrible. A description of the car must have been broadcast to all outlying police and the surrounding country stations immediately by Flynn and Angellotti, and Nance will be picked up somewhere down state."

"We've done our damndest," Lanny replied cheerfully. "Angels can do no more. I borrowed the car you left out front. It's in a garage. I'll send you the claim check."

For a week, the chief waited for news of Nance Belden, but no news came through beyond some gossip around the central station that the car had been driven but three miles and then abandoned—for which evidence that the Almighty was still on his side the worthy fellow was grateful.

So Nance was still in the city! McNamara's mind worked so automatically he did not even have to tell himself that, undoubtedly, she had taken sanctuary within a short distance of the spot where she had abandoned Flynn's car, nor did he have to remind himself that Flynn and Angellotti would come to the same conclusion. He had no difficulty in ascertaining the spot where the car had been recovered.

"Folsom street and Sixteenth, eh?" he reflected. "Residential—flat buildings and cheap apartment houses, cheap rooming houses and workmen's hotels. No, she wouldn't go to one of those. Not what she is—she has class—and she has two hundred dollars in her possession. She's holed up with a friend. What friend? Why, Ella Cates, of course."

He had already secured Ella Cates' address from the banker in San Jose. However, he realized it would not be wise to call upon her and run the risk of having Flynn or Angellotti run across him in the neighborhood or see him entering Ella Cates' house. The obvious thing, therefore, was to cast about for a job in another part of the city and see that both detectives were assigned to it.

While he was considering where he could dispose of them, the president of the Security Trust company in San Jose rang up.

"Miss Penelope Gatlin has just been in the bank, Chief," he told McNamara. "She has purchased a letter of credit for ten thousand dollars and has withdrawn in cash the remainder of the funds on deposit to the credit of her checking account, amounting to eleven hundred dollars."

"Is she in the bank now?"

"Yes."

"Have one of your clerks follow her. Give him some expense money—I'll be responsible for its repayment. And when you get his report please telephone me."

At three-thirty the banker telephoned again. "She purchased a ticket to San Francisco, on one of the buses leaving here at three fifteen. She spent two hours shopping."

The buses, McNamara knew, entered the city via Mission street, the bus depot was at Fifth and Mission streets. Ella Cates lived on Howard street, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth. Howard street runs between Mission and Folsom—and Flynn's car had been found abandoned at Sixteenth and Folsom. Nance was smart. She had left the car a block from Ella Cates' home and walked there. McNamara reasoned the incoming bus would drop the girl out at Sixteenth and Mission streets—a regular stop—and she would then make her way to the Cates woman's house.

He glanced at his watch. He had an hour and a half to intercept her; for that hour and a half he must have Flynn and Angellotti in another section of the city. To his annoyance he discovered they were out on a detail, so he decided he would have to risk it, called a taxi and drove to Ella Cates' address. To his inquiry regarding Mrs. Cates, he was informed that she had moved to parts unknown a week before, nor could his informant give him any clue to aid him in discovering her.

As he came out of the apartment house he glanced warily around and was amused to observe Detective Angellotti leaning against a cigar stand across the street. He was certain the detective had recognized him, for Angellotti immediately turned his back. The chief walked up Mission street, boarded a street car and was at the bus terminal two minutes before the bus on which Nance had left San Jose rolled in. But Nance was not among the passengers that alighted.

McNamara chuckled. Flynn and Angellotti would waste a great deal of time watching that apartment house in vain. Nance, discovering Ella Cates had moved, had sought quarters elsewhere. What puzzled McNamara, however, was the girl's failure to communicate with him or Lanny; and he knew now that she did not intend to. The fact that she had purchased a letter of credit was proof that she intended leaving the country, and the more the excellent fellow contemplated this impending move the more inclined was he to regard it as a not unmixing blessing. While Nance remained in San Francisco she would be a constant menace to himself and Lanny; if captured she might, during one of her uncontrolled moments, consider it a great joke to tell the world how she had been enabled to escape captivity so long.

"I can't baby the world," he decided. "I'll let her go. She'll probably live abroad, and when her letter of credit is gone she may remember who she is long enough to draw more checks. I can always get a line on her through the bank, and if Steve and Lanny still insist on salvaging this nut I'll tell them where to find her. Me, I'm through. If I keep this pace up I'll be as big a nut as she is."

There is more than a modicum of truth in the ancient adage, "Out of sight, out of mind." Dan McNamara lived a full life; and when Nance Belden had definitely passed beyond his ken and he knew himself safe at last from the prying of Messrs. Flynn and Angellotti into his private affairs, he forgot the girl, for pressing matters of great importance claimed his attention and he required more first-class assistance than he was receiving. He resolved, therefore, to give Flynn and Angellotti a week in which to make up their minds they had lost the trail; then to call them in.

On the sixth day, however, he received information that the doughty pair were still as busy as two pups with a feather duster. A beautiful lady called on him at his office and told him so.

"And who might you be?" he demanded.

"I'm Susan Engelbright."

"Oh! Alias Sapphire Susie. I've heard of you lately."

"Perhaps I hooked three twelve-carat sapphire rings to raise money, and the papers called me Sapphire Susie after that."

"I see you got them out of hock again, Susie."

The girl nodded. "Nance Belden got them out for me."

"Part of the bargain for smuggling that letter out of San Quentin for her, I suppose."

"Never mind what it was for," Sapphire Susie smiled archly and unafraid. "I earned it and she kept her word."

"Check or cash?" McNamara was frightened. If Sapphire Susie had been given a check, then she knew Nance Belden's real name and the name of her bank. And that would be fatal.

"I don't know. I gave her the pawn tickets and she got back the rings. I don't know just how."

"When?" He was relieved.

"A week ago tomorrow."

"And you say Detective Sergeant Flynn has been giving you a bad half hour?"

"Yes, he has."

"Well, that's his business. Nance Belden escaped from San Quentin and naturally he's interested in apprehending her. You were recognized by the guard at the main gate two weeks before Nance escaped. Miss Lanning, a friend of the Belden girl, had visited the prisoner that day, and since Miss Lanning was the only visitor Nance Belden had in San Quentin, naturally she was suspected of carrying a letter for delivery to the men who helped Nance escape. You rode down to Greenbrae with Miss Lanning, and she slipped the letter to you, of course. Flynn knows that. But why come to me with your tale of woe?"

"I've run straight since getting out of the pen. I served my time and I want to be let alone—that's why! Flynn told me that if I didn't come through and tell him where he could find Nance Belden he'd see to it that something nasty happened to me. I don't know where

Nance Belden is. And I want protection from Patrick Flynn."

"You seem pretty sure of me, don't you?"

"Well, Nance told me that you were one human being. And I called on Miss Lanning last night to tell her to warn Nance that the dicks were after her, and Miss Lanning told me to see you about it. She said you'd see I got a square deal."

"She did so, now? How did Miss Lanning treat you otherwise?"

"She kissed me and gave me a hundred dollars and told me to be as good as I could. The old girl is sure a darling."

"Did you ask her for the hundred?"

"Of course not."

The chief eyed her owlishly, for he distrusted Sapphire Susie and wondered if she might not be working in the interests of Flynn and Angellotti.

"This is interesting," he admitted heavily. "Of course I only keep in touch with the upper office through the captain of detectives. If he set Flynn on this job he should have interviewed you a couple of weeks ago. Seems to me he has overlooked a good bet. If he'd had you under surveillance a week ago he'd have picked up Nance Belden when she came to you to deliver the rings. Flynn's a crackjack detective," he added sadly, "but this looks as if he's slipping."

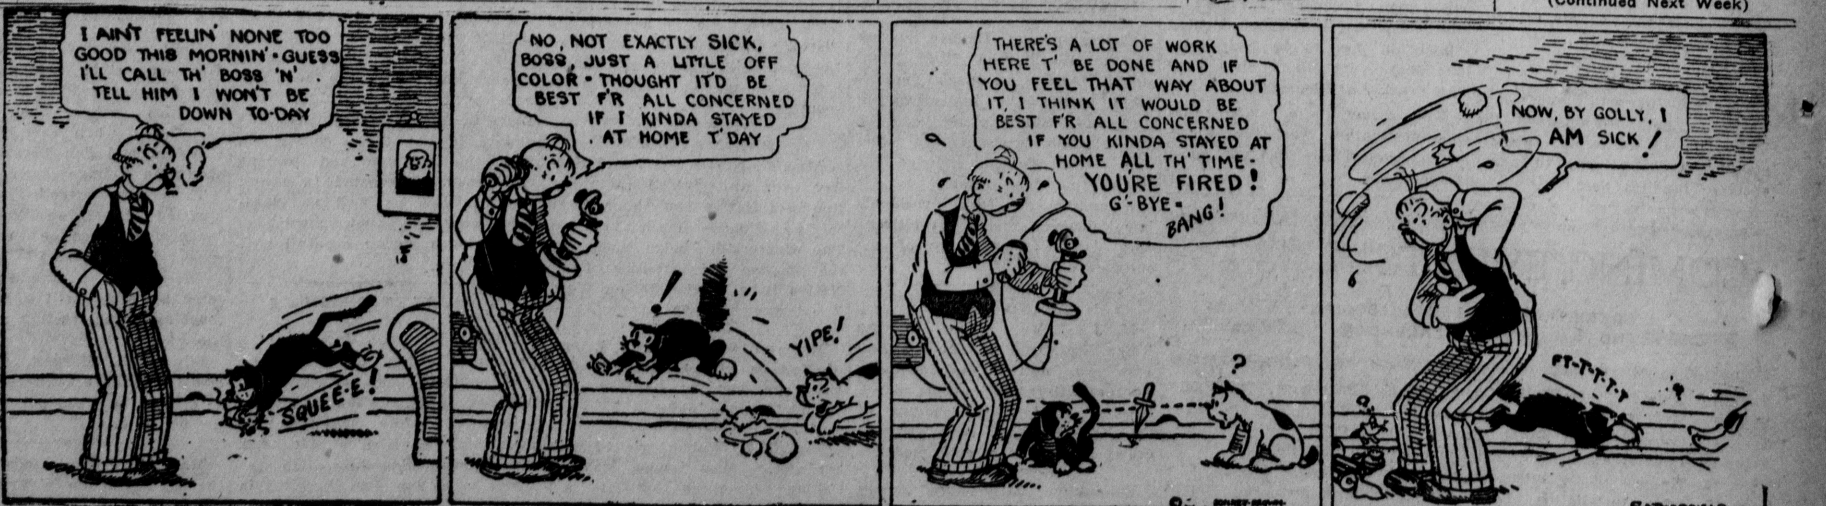

"That bird don't slip very far, take it from me, Chief. He met me on the street the day before yesterday and noticed I was wearing my big ring and my earrings. 'Hello, kid,' he says, 'I see you got your sapphires on again.' I says to him, 'Fall dead, you bum,' and walked on. And the next night he came up to my room. 'Nance Belden got them sapphires out of hock for you, Susie, my dear,' he says kindly. 'I want that trail. Where is she?'

"And you wouldn't tell him, even if you could?"

"That's a fact. I wouldn't snitch on her."

"You wouldn't expect me to interfere in the work of a detective sergeant when he appears to be doing a good job, would you, Susie? But I give you my word that I'll see to it that you're not harassed. Of course you helped Nance Belden to escape from San Quentin, and I know it, but I can't prove it; if I could I'd put you in the birdcage this minute. And I'll not put Flynn off the case, although if he gets too rough I'll stop him."

NILES JUNIORS HAVE INFORMAL MEETING TUESDAY NIGHT

For the first time since its organization in January, the Niles Junior Chamber of Commerce adjourned its regular meeting Tuesday night, when less than a quorum appeared. Reason for the poor attendance, officials pointed out, was because of the shift from the regular time on Monday, due to the holiday. With the total membership well over 120 mark, however, a quorum is a large number. There were nineteen at the meet.

Unable to conduct an official meeting, officials declared the gathering informal, and held a discussion of fall plans.

The attention of the group was called to the fact that the street cleaning service, supervised by James Delury, has been started.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL CAFETERIA PLAN IS ALTERED HERE

P-T. A. Changes System to Allow Tots Choice in Noon Lunch

Changes in the cafeteria system at the Niles Grammar school were announced this week by the Niles Parent-Teachers' Association, following a series of meetings in August at which details of the new plan were worked out.

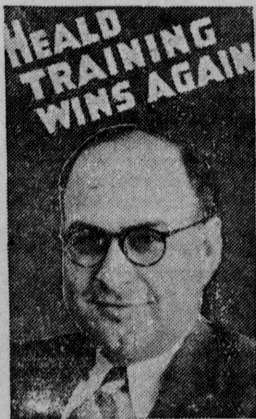

At a summer board meeting, held early in August, Mrs. Clark Griffin was given the entire management of the school lunch room. She will have charge of the buying and will supervise the serving. On August 7, another meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Roland Bendel, to arrange for changes in the cafeteria system. Mrs. Griffin, Mrs. A. J. Petsche, Mrs. C. H. Franklin, Mrs. R. H. Bennett and the president, Mrs. Doris Zwissig, worked out the details.

The new system, patterned after that used at the Centerville high school, will allow the children to choose their own food while progressing down a line past the trays. In the past, a set menu was provided. It was also decided to allow the children to handle their own funds this time, rather than have their teachers do it for them.

The first regular meeting for the fall term, at which work of the year will get under way, will be held at the school on Tuesday, September 17. The afternoon will be in the nature of a reception for the new parent members and the new teacher, Miss Margaret Breid. Parents of the seventh grade children will have charge of the refreshments for the day. Mrs. Roland Bendel will be chairman.

Among those who will direct a part of the activities for the season will be Mrs. Marguerite Crane, who will serve as chairman of the program committee, and Mrs. Jack Alberg, publicity chairman.

Surviving Civilizations
Of the many civilizations that have existed in this world, only three have lived from the dawn of history to the present day. They are the Jews and the peasants of China and India who, by nature, are placid and pacific. Nearly all other great civilizations have been based on a military form of culture and eventually destroyed themselves.—Collier's Weekly.

"MUSICAL NIGHT" IS PLANNED BY K. C. COUNCIL HERE

A "Musical Night," one of the fall feature planned by the Centerville council, Knights of Columbus, will be held on Thursday night, September 12, at the Parish hall, according to Tom Maloney, grand knight. The occasion will be on the regular meeting night.

With instrumental and vocal numbers included, the program is being arranged by Edward Kettman, whose orchestra will be on hand. John Vasconcellos, and Tony Rose will sing. Ernest Pimentel and Bert Silveria will render instrumental selections.

George Colt will supervise serving of refreshments following the program.

At the business session, the plans for the "Football Night" will be discussed, as well as those for the Columbus day program and the annual card party. Winners of the Pedro tournament, which ended at the session after the meeting on August 22, are: John Vierra, Anthony Rose, William Furtado and M. F. George.

According to Ernest Pimentel, the following councils have been formally invited to attend the "Football Night" program:

San Jose, San Mateo, Palo Alto, Hayward, Oakland, Berkeley, Contra Costa, Magellan, St. Mary's College, Alameda, The Niles Y. L. I. and Coach Jess Regli and his football team have also been asked to attend.

Prominent football coaches who will be on hand are: George Barsi, Santa Clara University; Jimmy Hole, University of California, and Dud De Grott, San Jose State.

INTEREST SHOWN IN NIGHT SCHOOL PORTUGUESE CLASS

Foreign languages in the course of study offered at the Washington Union High Night school, include Portuguese and Spanish, both beginning and advanced classes. Both are taught by Mrs. Curry. The Spanish classes were begun this year.

Considerable interest is shown in the district in the Portuguese classes. Night school authorities hope that an increase in attendance will insure continuation of the courses.

FOUR VETERANS TO BE NUCLEUS OF HUSKER II

With the initial game of the season just a little more than a week away, Coach Jess Regli, of the Washington high school eleven, is whipping his rebuilt team into effective condition. Built around the nucleus of four veterans, the aggregation will present a formidable front again this year. Regli is aiming at another championship, and the permanent retention of the trophy.

The mainstays in the backfield will be Al Muniz, the slippery star of last year's team, and Red Sinclair and Silva, tackle and end respectively, will be back in the list. Neither Sinclair nor Medeiros had returned to school early this week, but Regli expects them in uniform Monday, in time to get into shape for the Pittsburg clash on September 13.

The center berth, held down by chunky Louis Manuel last season, will likely be held by lanky Dan Juarez this season. Juarez saw plenty of action last year. Milton Durham, a rangy tackle, will no doubt be a regular this year.

Among the forty-five candidates out for the varsity and class teams, there are boys with plenty of class. Bill Booras, Harry and Morgan Cesari, Bob Solon, Bob Salz, Joe Avilla, Pete Bunting, John Gattaneo, Dan Costa, Frank Correa, Tommy Duarte, Alex De Knoop, Lyle Fisher, Alvin and Sidney Gaunt, George Fields, Robert Hodges, Takeo Hirabayashi, George Hikedo, Mitsuru Ichisaka, George Jorgensen, Bob Medeiros, Paul Manley, Bert McKernan, Sam Muni, Bob Matos, Bud Mello, Julie Pine, Mel Nunes, Carl Nunes, Walter Rupp, Stanley Rogers, Earle Richardson, Leonard Rose, Louis Silva, Bob Steinhauer, George Tereza and Bob Zwissig are those from among whom Coach Regli will choose his lineup.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rogers and family spent the week-end at their summer home near Alameda.

Dr. Paul Johnson and daughters were recent visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Mathiesen.

Mr. and Mrs. M. F. George, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Swift and Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Silva and family enjoyed an outing to Santa Cruz over the week-end.

NEWLY DISCOVERED HORMONE HELPS MEN PAST 40

Generally around and after 40 one's vigor becomes impaired and his vitality lowered, due in many cases to mental and physical fatigue or to tired, sluggish glands.

A new discovered hormone (gland activator) has been found to be of remarkable help in improving vigor and increasing vitality. Clinical tests with this hormone have produced amazing results.

The hormone, fortified by other valuable agents, is now available in tablet form under the trade name of Zo-ak (blue package for men—orange package for women) and may be obtained at any drug store which will refund your money if you do not feel considerably benefited after taking Zo-ak uninterruptedly for one month.

An interesting booklet "For Men Who Want to Live" tells more about the hormone and how it helps men past 40. This booklet written by a distinguished American physician will be sent to you free in sealed envelope by Zo-ak Co., 55 W. 46th St., New York.

HOME MEMBERS ON THEATER PARTY LAST FRIDAY

By courtesy of the management of the Masonic Home, thirteen out of twenty men and women, organized for volunteer work in the kitchen, were taken to the Hayward theater, Friday evening. Superintendent Hartman, who drove one of the cars, was also host for light refreshments at the close of the show. Tuesday those making the trip, speaking for themselves and the absentees, handed Hartman an autographed memorial of appreciation. E. F. Hughes, foreman, made the presentation. Stones in Washington Monument

There is a general impression the Washington monument has been constructed of the finest stone from all the states, but this is not true. One hundred seventy-nine stones have been contributed by cities, counties and states and a few foreign countries, but the bulk of the monument is constructed of New England granite surfaced with Maryland marble. The upper feet of the monument is marble. Literary Digest
